There's no end to the Outdoor Fun . . . 2020

Fishing, camping and outdoor recreation carries on in the High Sierra

By Christina Reed

Eastern Sierra, CA—Getting outdoors, fishing, camping, hiking, bike riding, climbing, walking, rock collecting, riding horses, off-roading, playing with our dogs, or visiting with old friends were going strong in the Eastern Sierra this past weekend, as the world was reeling from the Covid-19 virus. Plenty of folks were in town for the Blake Jones Trout Derby, even in its modified form, and despite the windy weather, anglers caught fresh trout, they had fun with family and friends, and they were all smiles with their stringers full of fish.

The outdoors in the High Sierra is the number one draw of this area, and as advertised for decade upon decade, the Blake Jones Trout Derby (for 52 years) provided a great way for visitors and residents alike to enjoy the wide open spaces (albeit, it was windy, but it always seems to be in March). The Pleasant Valley campground had visitors out enjoying the sunshine and the company of friends and family, and although it was tough fishing in the wind, there were plenty of people who were happy to be away from work, the city, and the constant reminders of the things that were going on in the world.

The Herrera family came up from Riverside, CA for the weekend, and Lynal said they found a space at Pleasant Valley campground, and settled in for a fun time with each other. They've been coming up to the Blake Jones Trout Derby for years, but this time brought both of their boys, Jesse (13) and Nathan (11). Lynal had stopped me as I was covering the
